President Anderson Makes a Run for the Border

In an emergency press conference, called early yesterday morning, President William "Smilin' Bill" Anderson, announced he would resign as Mary Washington College president, to take the coveted job of Taco Bell night manager. "I told the BOV that when Davies left, I would too. When he left with our winning program, there was just no way I could stay," announced the jovial, but obviously discontented Anderson.

Barely defacing 7-11's Ape woman and several former MWC security guards for this noble position, Anderson acknowledged the difficult nature of his surprise decision. "It was a difficult decision."

"At this point in my career, and with my ultimate political ambitions, this is obviously the best step for me to take."

Anderson apparently made his run for the border yesterday around noon. "I saw some big fella flyin' down Route 1, and I mean, it was just a blur, his stubby little legs was just a movin'," stated one local Fredericksburg resident while seated in his large, elevated vehicle.

"I wanted a real job where I could literally fart around. I mean, that ethnic food tears me up. Ask Ray Merchant, he'll tell you. Those fajitas, mmm... bad bad bad."

Anderson added that there were a lot of similarities in both positions. "Passing a bill by the BOV, is kind of like passing one of those burritos," explained Anderson, "so with that background, and my experience in such matters, I think I'll be able to adjust pretty well."

The campus community was shocked by his decision. "I'm shocked," said Public Information director Ron Singleton.

While College officials maintain that Anderson left for financial reasons, sources close to GW (not Westminster) have speculated about other, undisclosed reasons for the President's recent decision.

"We think he left for undisclosed reasons," announced an anonymous informant, "but we're not sure what they are."

With Anderson's departure, Assistant Dean for Minority Student Services, Art "Doctor J" Brooks has been named as the College's new executive. Brooks expressed his enthusiasm over the announcement. "Good. It's about time. Now we can get that new gym so I don't have to call Winners." Brooks also detailed his plans for turning MWC into a culturally diverse institution based on open-mindedness, and tolerance. (No, this is serious.) Meanwhile, Anderson's drawing about $5.33 an hour, and is scrubbing public bathrooms with ammonia and 409. "The urinals aren't so bad," admitted Anderson, "it's that stool scrubbing that sucks."

Trinkle Readied For Roller Blade Action

By Mean Jean the Derby Queen

On Thursday, April 26, President William Anderson announced revised plans for the renovation of Trinkle Hall. According to Anderson, the old library will be transformed into a giant Roller Blades rink. Trinkle Hall was originally slated to become an academic building.

"When the Roller Blades team came for Wellness Day, we saw how much our students enjoyed the program and decided to implement it in our institution," explained Anderson.

The new remodeling will begin immediately. The rink will encompass most of the building, but room will be left for a snack bar, DJ/music area, and a place for roller blade rentals. It has not been determined whether skating will be free for MWC students or whether there will be a minimal charge.

Already, a roller blades club has been formed. Laura Kasley '93 decided to begin the creation of the "Blade Runners" as soon as she heard the news.

"I never used to stay on campus on the weekends," Kasley said, "But now with the Blade Runners - I want to stay and roller blade all weekend!"

The club will officially begin in the fall of next year and will meet twice a month. At each meeting, experienced bladers will discuss their impressive techniques and, at the end of the meetings, members will be allowed to try the latest tricks.

The rink will remain open late on weekends.

"It seems like a really cool idea," observed Krista Houser '93. "This way my boyfriend can come up and I can finally skate during the double-oh-only time."

"It'll be great. Just wish they would have thought of it before graduation," senior Jody Hobbs declared.

Jon Beam '92 feels the idea is pretty stupid. "They need more academic buildings and turning Trinkle into a roller derby is a waste of a perfectly good building," he complained.

Some of the new residents of North Hall are upset because the rink is going to be so far away from their dorm.

Shapiro Maimed By New Scanner

MWC's beloved Bernier lost three fingers in a freak scanner accident.

By Gila S. Pal
Bull Staff Writer

Tragedy struck Mary Washington College last week when Bernie Shapiro, a Seacobeck employee, lost three fingers while scanning a student's I.D.

"It really is a shame that Bernie had to get hurt, but these computers are here to stay," ARA manager Gordon Ingested.

Inge also added, "All the employees could be down to seven fingers each, and still wouldn't get rid of the system. It has benefited the school too much."

The accident occurred during the dinner rush on double fish night last week. Bernie began to panic when he saw how long the line was, and he started getting a little careless with the machine. Gib U. Stumps '91 handed Bernie his I.D., and the machine would not accept it. This in itself was surprising since the machine accepts almost all I.D.'s, no matter how turned they are. Shapiro continued to run the I.D. through the scanner trying to get it to work. Of course, as all Seacobeck employees do, Bernie politely suggested to Stumps that he obtain a new I.D. from the police station.

Then Shapiro tried one final time to run the I.D. through the scanner, and according to one eye witness, "It looked like the machine came to life."

When Bernie tried to remove his fingers and the I.D., they would not budge. Remaining calm, he lifted his hand and tried to shake the scanner off. It was to no avail; his fingers were stuck. Bernie then screamed, but no one knew how to help. One by one, freshmen Jeff Lancy, commented, "I didn't know what to do. I tried to pull his fingers free. Now he is as good as new; he just can't wave as well with his right hand."

The student body has been very supportive through this tragedy. Most are wearing a black ribbon around three fingers to commemorate Bernie's bravery.

In the spirit of Earth Day, the fingers were recycled into french fries. A word of advice--don't be so hasty to get into the dining room on double fish night. Think of Bernie.

Willard Hall Resident Director Kath Burger, resigned last week after allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced.

By Beak Action
Bull Associate Editor

Willard residents mourned the loss of Head Resident Kath Burger on Monday, after she resigned her position in the wake of allegations that she was having an illicit affair with senior Dave Saunders.

Resident Assistant John Applin '90 discovered the happy couple in the first floor broom closet and referred the matter to the administration, after snapping some photos for personal use.

Burger adamantly denied the allegations. "It was a setup. I was helping Mr. Saunders get something out of the closet and he attacked me," she argued. "I plan on filing charges with the local authorities."

Sex Scandal Rocks MWC Saunders caught with pants down

Saunders, who recently got out of prison for being a menace to the college community (and stealing a car), said that the allegations were indeed true.

"Actually we've been going out for about two years," said Saunders. "She even went to Florida with me over Spring Break. It was awesome."

"We're in love and plan to be married in the summer," he boasted.

Many students, however, were shocked by the news of the steamy affair.

"They don't exactly have a great past," stated Willard RA Steve Soltohub '90. "In fact, she had him banned from the dorm earlier this semester. I was really surprised."

"Most people think that Kath is a bitchy, no-good, communist cow," asserted Saunders, "but actually she's a conservative democrat."

Apparently, Saunders had written some unpleasantness about the veteran den member in the college newspaper and Burger allegedly accused Saunders of vandalizing her car.

"It was all a cover," admitted Saunders.

Burger defended herself, claiming, "I can't believe these charges. After all, if I was going to have sex in a broom closet it certainly wouldn't be with that Saunders boy. He's kind of underdeveloped if you know what I mean."

Dave Versaw '98, a resident of Willard, was also surprised by the allegations. "Kath isn't that kind of girl. Besides that Saunders guy is a dork."

"This if she went out with anyone, it certainly would have been me," argued the studly Versaw.

Applin was quick to tell his story. "I caught them," he bragged. "I mean, how else would I know that Dave has a little Tasmanian devil tattooed on his left cheek?"

"They were kinda, well you know, all over each other when I opened the door the first time," explained Applin, who then ran to grab his camera.

He returned to the scene approximately ten minutes later - after citing his mother, two maids, and Phi Kappa Phi for illegal possession of alcohol.

"It was incredible," continued Applin. "When I got back, they were still naked. Dave is my hero!"

When asked what he intends to do with the snapshots, Applin replied, "I've contacted Hustler and Playboy about a possible deal, but I'm not lettin' those negatives out of my sight."

Campus police have launched a full investigation which will include extensive forensic testing of hair and fluid samples taken from the closet.

"It was pretty nasty," observed police-boy-wannabe Jim Bartlett.

Muhammad to Teach Jewish History

The university accepted teachings of the Nation of Islam will be offered for credit at MWC in the fall.

By Ian Plotkin
Bull Staff Writer

Dr. Khalid Abdul Muhammad, a noted authority on Judaism, will teach Introduction to Jewish History--a new course for the Fall 1990 semester.

Muhammad has devoted much of his life to the study of the Jewish religion and his affection for kosher food is well-known. The course will be taught in Monroe 104 because it is the only classroom large enough to hold Muhammad's bodyguards as well as a few students.

An official in the office of Academic services was quoted as saying, "We feel quite privileged to have a man as esteemed as Dr. Muhammad as a visiting professor."

Introduction to Jewish History will be a three credit class and will be taught on MWF from 9:05 to 9:55 except during Passover when it will be taught by a guest speaker chosen by a campus organization.

This is the perfect opportunity for any Mary Washington student, full or part-time, to get the unbiased teachings of a man who is highly respected in the Jewish community.

There is a dress requirement for this course--all students attending must wear a bow tie. Not required, but highly appreciated, is the student willing to shave his/her head for Dr. Muhammad.

Statue of Dean Beck to Be Constructed in Monroe Square

Students enjoy their final days at the fountain between Willard and the Vault.

By Will B. Drie
Bull Staff Writer

In keeping with the vision of making Mary Washington a "dry" college, the administration decided last week to replace the fountain in front of Willard Hall with a statue of JoAnne Beck, dean of students.

"I feel honored that the school is making a statue to me," commented Beck.

"The fountain serves as a social facility just like alcohol serves as a drink for social events and serves as a reminder of these events," explained Beck. "We need to get these thoughts out of the student's minds and filling in the fountain will help."

Beck was chosen because of her efforts toward revamping and enforcing the college's alcohol policy according Ron Singleton, spokesman for the College.

"Our goal has been to eliminate alcohol from this college and with Beck's guidance, we have almost completed that task," added Conrad Warlick, executive assistant to the president.

The statue will be made by Anione LeBeauf '91, an art major. It will be made out of scrap metal and will be completed by the beginning of the fall semester.

"I'm very excited about doing such a prestigious object," stated LeBeauf. "I am using beer cans as the featured material. I feel it would show how Dean Beck has guided us down the right path away from alcohol."

There has been some controversy over destroying the fountain.

"It's a cherished part of Mary Washington," said Krista Houser '93. "It's a place where people can meet or just lay out in the sun and relax."

"Where will we get to cool off on those hot days?" asked Chip Payne '92.

"Someone's always putting detergent in it or dye or some such nonsense," added Andrews.

The administration feels that they are taking the proper course of action.

"We hope that the statue will inspire the students to stop drinking," added Warlick. "Alcohol has done enough damage not only to our college but to our students. The fountain is like an oasis just tempting everyone who passes."

Bashore Announces Post-Grad Plans

By U.R. Dumm
Bull Staff Writer

Recently, former SA President Scott Bashore '90 decided that he will take a job at Vito's Bowl-a-rama of Fredericksburg after graduation. He was also offered a job at Senator Warner's office, but chose Vito's instead. He will be head of shoe maintenance and rentals. Bashore explained that he chose the job because of the possibility for advancement and the friendly atmosphere at Vito's.

"I want to be around people who aren't fake, who care about the simple me—simple people with simple lives who will always be upfront and honest," said Bashore.

"I've done enough politicking this year. I've decided I want to take it easy. I want to have time to sit back and drink a few beers with the guys," declared Bashore.

He said the D.C. scene was too active for him.

"The people who work in D.C. are only interested in getting what they need. They never take the time to talk to the people behind the scenes," added Bashore.

His new job will include passing out, collecting, and cleaning bowling shoes. "A lot of people think that the job is too simple, but it can be really challenging when a whole line of people need shoes and they're counting on me," he added. "I also have to make sure the shoes are neat and in order at closing time."

Along with this change, Bashore is also getting married in June. He and his new bride plan on living in the Stafford Trailer Court just outside of Fredericksburg.

Losers-boy Scott Bashore will work at Vito's Bowl-a-rama after graduation.

"Yeah, we're headed for the burbs," bragged Bashore.

"I can't wait to get our new lives underway," beamed Thelma Lou Shiffert, Bashore's fiancée. "I'm real excited about Scott's future. I know he'll do real good."

"This is exactly what I want for us," she added. "We both want a big family, seven or eight kids, and we want them to be raised in a place where they can learn the true value of things."

Bashore's parents are very proud that their son is stepping out on his own.

"We're very pleased that Scott wants to be a shoe distributor," said Mr. Bashore.

"At Vito's he can put to use all of the knowledge he gained at college."

Versaw, MWC to Offer Cable in Fall

By Jus Callem Quickdraw
Bull Staff Writer

Mary Washington College senior and business administration major Dave Versaw recently opened a new business for the residential students of MWC. Beginning in the fall of 1990, he will offer cable television.

"It thought it was about time," stated Versaw. "In keeping with the College's new global initiative, we plan to offer a wide range of programming. Students here deserve an opportunity to see beyond the Fredericksburg area."

The cable will run through the steam tunnels, which Versaw mapped out extensively in the fall.

He tested the system in his room this past year and found the reception to be quite good.

"It took a long time and hard work to install, but it looks good and should last a long time," added Versaw.

"We really enjoyed it," commented Mike Antonio '91, Versaw's roommate. "It was great getting to spend time viewing the educational programs that they offer on cable."

The administration was concerned that too many students would spend time watching TV and not concentrating on their studies.

JoAnne Beck, dean of students, said that at first she was apprehensive about the system, but after talking to Versaw, she realized that the students could benefit from the system.

"We feel the students could learn a lot from the programming," said Conrad Warlick, executive assistant to the president. "It's good he's giving the students an opportunity to broaden their horizons."

April 1 - Federal agents and State Department officials concluded a four year investigation into a communist spy ring. In a spectacular raid on Willard Hall, tactical units rounded up the key figures in an infiltration plot that could have destabilized the economic and political structure of the U.S. had it succeeded. The ring leaders, Rich Cooper, an aspiring young republican, and Jeff Poole, editor of a radical underground paper, Das Pravda, were arrested and charged with a plethora of offenses including spying and conspiracy to sell secret documents.

April 1 - Fredericksburg police and the MWC tactical response squad captured Todd Baker of Stafford after a three hour high-speed chase through the city. Baker, a champion go cart racer, spread terror and sedition throughout the community atop his formula 1 cart by throwing pepper gas grenades and communist literature to citizens and businesses. He was run aground after he attempted to jump the Rappahannock river via a ramp constructed by co-conspirators.

April 1 - Tim Hughes walked away from a fight. He is being held at St. Elizabeth's mental facilities for observation.

April 1 - Units from the special subversion unit of the Fredericksburg police raided 1410 Franklin St. and uncovered several tons of East Block Ordinance. Jim "Mosby" Bartlett was arrested. Included in the cache were 57 Hungarian AK-47's, 120,000 rounds of Soviet 7.62 ammo, 20581 mm mortar rounds, 25 RPK light machine guns, 17 anti-tank rocket launchers and a copy of Green Eggs and Ham, by the noted radical Dr. Suess. Bartlett claimed that he was a church missionary and that the weapons were placed by police in an effort to frame him.

April 1 - Doug Blair became the first man in history to orbit the earth without the aid of a rocket. After consuming large amounts of the volatile rocket fuel, 151 Bacardi, he accidentally sparked ignition with his computer. He was recovered and charged with flying while drunk and violation of global airspace.

April 1 - When police attempted to break up a party on Charles St., they encountered fierce resistance from students who fought them from extensive tunnel and bunker positions. The mastermind of the complex, Scott Rizzo, escaped, and is being sought by the authorities.

April 1 - Noted subversive, Dave Harris was captured by CIA units two days after he was awarded entrance into the Order of Lenin by Soviet president. Getchorskooff. He was being sought in connection with an alleged coup plot against College president Bill Anderson.

April 1 - Two white males, Dennis and Jim, were arrested after they exposed themselves to long-time campus employee Bernie Shapiro.

The Roller Blades rink wasn't placed in Goolrick because there was not enough room in the building. There were also some concerns that roller blades might become so popular that all the students would be on one end of campus.

"Having all the students on one end of campus would cause a lot of noise," commented Sergeant Harold English, a campus police officer. "That's why we spread the fun things around campus."

Joanne Beck, dean of Students hopes the students realize what a great service we are doing for them. "There is so much that goes on around campus and this is another fun thing for students to do. I hope they enjoy it," she stated.

HEALTH BEAT

Q: Lately I've noticed an increase in my allergy symptoms—sneezing, runny nose, shortness of breath, etc. Is this just a result of the increase in pollen or are there other things involved?

A: Actually, pollen probably plays a very minor role in your problem, considering that we haven't experienced a string of very mild days which leads to an increase in the pollen count. However, several other factors may be causing your discomfort. The leading causes of itching, swelling, and oozing within the nasal passages are sexual contact and improper maintenance.

In addition to spreading sexually transmitted diseases, repeated aural and nasal sex can irritate or even burst the tiny membranes which line the nasal passages. This leads to the swelling which causes an assortment of symptoms which are similar to those you described. If you must partake in these sexual irregularities, there are means of prevention such as the nasal/aural diaphragm (one size fits all) or the common condom. Both of these options are available at the Health Center.

Improper maintenance, though a less frequent cause of allergies, is also a possible cause of your symptoms. Remember: You should always wipe from front to back.

I'm tired of being called a liberal. I'm tired of being called a leftist democrat. I'm tired of anti-semitic speakers on campus. I'm tired of hiding behind this leftist facade. The truth must be known. It's time for me to come out of the closet.

The allegations that I am a right wing, ultra-conservative republican are indeed true. The Ronald Reagan pin-up, which for years I kept hidden under my bed, now adorns my closet door. The autographed George Bush picture which I've kept enshrined in my closet for these many years can now exist in a hallowed state at my bedside. My secret yearning desires for Jean Kirkpatrick, her mind, her body, can now be shamelessly admitted.

My fear that Gorbachev is really the devil, and my wish for weapons systems from sea to shining sea can now be known to all.

I voted for Bush in the last election, and for Reagan in the one before that. Had I been old enough, Tricky Dick would have gotten my support as well.

Liberalism IS an intellectual rationalization for the weak-kneed or simply unpatriotic.

I support the Republicans in their endeavors. In the past nine years of the G.O.P.'s regime, the debt has nearly tripled, the poverty rate has grown, the number of homeless in our nation has increased, and I love it. As a diehard Republican, how can I not?

Rich Cooper is my hero!

I'm tired of this free cheese crap. I demand a huge defense budget, and support all programs to cut all educational funding. Who cares if they learn? Let the druggies run wild. Let them kill each other off. We don't need money for that crap, unless you want to go into Colombia and kick some butt. Just look at what we did in Grenada. Let that be a lesson to all.

I love this college! I love pink! I, well love is a strong word, I like Mike Smith!

My past four years here have been the most fantastic four years of my life! Lately, I have become sentimental about leaving this wonderful place! But as I reflect upon pleasant memories of friends, fun, and wild women, and men, I realize what makes our beloved institution the fabulous place that it is—student involvement! Rah rah rah.

Getting involved is the most important thing any student can do at this wonderful place! Any time I give a tour, or hit on some impressionable freshmen, I stress student involvement! I tell them that next to wearing pastels, preferably pink, it's the most important thing they can do in their college careers! College is what you make it! Rah rah rah.

Your involvement, is what will institute change here at ol' Mary Washington! By getting involved, you can accomplish whatever you want! My own college life is a prime example! I practice what I preach! Without me, the Class Council would fall into the incompetent hands of nappy headed and wall-climbing Brendan! I got involved! I made a difference! I wear pink! Rah rah rah.

If you don't become involved, you'll only hurt yourself! By getting involved, you can change things here at Mary Washington! You can be full of school pride, knowing that you have helped changed things for the better here at this lovely, beautiful place! I did, and I'm full of it! Just ask the Bullet staff! Rah rah rah.

The key to a successful college career, and a thriving campus, is student involvement! You must become involved. Help Mary Washington to be a better place! Make improvements that will last long after you fail out! My point here is to get involved! Rah rah rah.

Geeko-Update

By Aldus

Most of you non-environmentally aware college students, swelling boxes in ecologically unsafe containers, have yet to realize the catastrophe that has beset our spaceship Earth. Just a week ago our fragile water supply was corrupted by a huge oil spill that may cost our delicate ecosystem millions of gallons of fresh drinking water as well as numerous species of wildlife. On Friday, April 20, 1990, the Itza Pizza mountain bike Valdez crashed into the ravine next to the Student Center, spilling over four hundred thousand gallons of the infamous "oily pepperoni" type crude oil. Unfortunately, that was just from the first slice. Slices two through six splashed another twenty thousand gallons into the Fredericksburg water system.

The bikes' driver, Jim Bartlett, a former Exxon service station attendant, was reportedly inebriated at the time of the accident.

Although Bartlett was never officially reprimanded by the government, Itza's parent company, ABC food services, quietly removed him from his delivery services. Bartlett now spends his days comfortably living in the Eagles nest, eating food from environmentally unsafe tableware.

This slap on the wrist is an outrage to environmentalists worldwide and may set back the next harmonic convergence another thousand years. Now all of these amulets and crystals are worthless.

But maybe it's not his fault. I took a closer look at ABC's operations. When I confronted some of the petroleum engineers at Itza, they quietly pulled me aside and confessed that they knew about the crimes against our great green Earth, but feared for their jobs and livelihoods if they exposed the truth to the public. I convinced them to help me. Dressed in oil soaked coveralls and a construction helmet one engineer said "There's just so much of the oil, we can't get rid of it all. Management keeps pushing us harder and harder to pack as much oil as we can into each slice. All the guys from the pumping station, to the refinery, to the delivery people are way overworked. Something like this was bound to happen." His anguish was accentuated by a poster in the kitchen bearing the slogan "a barrel per slice is very nice." Another worker, the kitchen's pizza development engineer, told me "Dammit, we work hard to make damn fine pizza. But some college accountant puke at the top thought we'd boost profits by adding oil to shorten the cooking time. Yeah, it worked. Now it only takes thirty seconds to bake a pizza, but the residual oil just floats on the top like a Bering strait oil slick. Pizza is my life dammit, and this hurts. It really hurts."

So, once again, we see corporate America exploiting its workers and the environment for a mere percentage. This catastrophe of greed must be put to an end. So rise up and be counted among those who care enough to say "Earth day, every day."

I'm Bad As Hell... By Fel On

When I first came to Mary Washington College, I was impressed by its magnificent beauty. Ah...the trees, the squirrels, the fresh flowers, and of course (though not recently) the amphitheater.

(In case you are wondering what in the living hell I'm writing about I usually write about things that make me Mad as Hell, so for this issue, The Bull, I've decided to silence my critics and be positive about 'ol MWC, rah!)

Sometimes we, as students, fail to see the beauty that surrounds us. When was the last time you stopped to smell the flowers that they cram into the ground two days before the Board of Visitors convenes? When was the last time you looked at a cute, cuddly squirrel and thought how nice it would be to take it back to your dorm room and kill it? And what about the amphitheater? What in the Hell happened to the amphitheater? We can spend thousands on dormant fountains, Jeep Cherokee's, Seacobeck scanners, and racist speakers from the Nation of Islam, BUT we can't spend a few dollars to fix up a beautiful, old outdoor amphitheater.

Somehow, I just don't think this "positive" thing is going to work. The title of the column is "I'm Mad as Hell", not "Rich Cooper's Rosy Anecdotes."

I honestly tried to think of something positive to write about. I did. I tracked my brains all night thinking of kind and sincere things to write about. The best I could come up with was, "The Beauty Of MWC." Then I thought, "Forget it. I'll let the Admissions Office handle 'positive.'" I'll stick to negative.

Some Suggestions for Making MWC a "real school."

- 1) Get rid of ARA and totally revamp Seacobeck.
- 2) Save our money and forget about this stupid satellite campus in Stafford.
- 3) Fire the Dean of Residence Life and hire someone who will LISTEN to students.
- 4) For God sakes, get a football team!
- 5) Fredericksburg is not a hotbed of criminal activity, so take away the campus cops' 9mm Glock semi-automatic pistols before they hurt someone.
- 6) Students do not need to be protected from other students—do away with Visitation Restrictions.
- 7) etc.

Well, I feel better already.

Freud Replaces Fischer; Libido Replaces Line of Scrimmage

By Droll A. Lott
Bull Sports Editor

Anyone who has had Dr. Christopher Kilmartin in psychology, or knows him, personally is aware of his distaste for football, but few are aware of the circumstances that led to this deep-seated animosity.

Kilmartin was a walk-on for the football team at Frostburg State as a freshman. It was the beginning of yet another Cinderella story. A scrappy 6-3, 175 pound wide receiver, Kilmartin showed brief glimpses of a young Lynn Swann in scrimmages, but it was not until his sophomore year that the call came to hit the proverbial gridiron. And he hit it in grand fashion, scoring twice in his initiation against powerhouse Coppin State.

Unfortunately hapless Frostburg was to be buried in a 0-25 slump during Kilmartin's career and he received little national recognition despite being the first receiver to be triple teamed in a football game!

Then one day it happened. The year was 1977 and Kilmartin was about to graduate with a bachelor's in psychology. The 0-25 skid hung over his head like an albatross in labor. Scouts from a few token NFL teams had made the trek to West Virginia Tech to watch the magician work his magic in his final game, but the critics doubted Houdini himself could lead Frostburg to victory.

Rain had splashed the West Virginia field for days and two feet of mud concealed any semblance of hashmarks. Sports writers of the day cited the first half as the ugliest spectacle they had ever witnessed on a football field. But the second half yielded its diamond in the rough.

Frostburg trailed 3-0 with minutes remaining. Frostburg quarterback Corky Rittenhauer described the final Frostburg drive of the season:

"The first two downs of the series we farked around on the ground and we were lookin' at a third and seven on their 13. Kilmartin came into that huddle and gave me one helluva a tongue lashing. He told me to throw him the ball. I hadn't thrown more than five times all day, but I knew...I knew. Chris faded deep down the right side, but there was no way I could see him through the sheets of rain. I figured we were going to lose, but I threw it anyway, as far as I could."

The ball, like a torpedo duly hitting the broadside of a battleship, floated into Kilmartin's awaiting hands, 12 yards from scrimmage. He twisted, faked twice to his left and then barreled one yard into the Frostburg history books with three defenders draped all over his heaving frame. The Baltimore Colts took notice and though much-criticized for their decision, used their important 18th round selection to

Months later he was hauling in bullets from the golden arm of one Bert Jones and making a bid for an opening day spot on the Colts roster. Jones had nothing but praise for the rookie: "Hands of glue. I'll quit the team before they take Chris out of the starting lineup."

Starting lineup it was. Opening day at RFK and Kilmartin was coming home to play in front of friends and family. The Colts received the opening kickoff and in a matter of moments, Kilmartin was to line up at wide receiver opposite the Stinks' Pat Fischer.

Fischer earned his daily bread by doing everything in his power to hinder his opponent, even if he had to cheat. (What a rarity, a cheap shot artist in Washington.) But Kilmartin was aware of the tainted legacy of Pat Fischer and when he received a handful of dirt to the face on the opening play, he was not surprised. Kilmartin relates the incident, "I was not surprised."

No stretchers were necessary to carry the wounded warrior from the field, but a camera shot of Chris' mother crying in the stands told the story. Many feared he would not return, but his teammates took heart and an inspired Jones led them to a fourth and eight at the Washington 30. It was an obvious field goal situation, but four immortal words ripped through the RFK silence, "Get me in there!" A hush fell over the crowd as Kilmartin sauntered onto the field despite protests from the Colts' trainer: "He can't see!"

The Colts were going for it as Fischer glared at Kilmartin. Jones dropped back into the pocket and Kilmartin dodged numerous handfuls of dirt as he streaked down the sideline. The aging Fischer could not keep up and a groan filled the throats of thousands as the pass left Jones' hand. But Jones had terribly underthrown his receiver and Kilmartin had to wait, five yards from the goal line.

Many claim to have heard the snap of his neck or the crushing blow of Fischer's forearm to the skull, no one is sure. As a choked groan chilled the hearts of even the noblest of men, the two upright hands of the official were small consolation.

Jones sobbed uncontrollably at the sight of his receiver's mangled frame motionless in the end zone (skeptics cited the play being called back because of an offside on the tight end as the reason for Bert's emotion) as Fischer gloated over the decaying corpse.

Six nullified points do not a career make, nor do they place a man in the NFL record books, but anyone who witnessed that day realizes what might have been.

This long, rocky, painful road eventually led to Frederickburg and Chandler Hall with Freud replacing Fischer and libido replacing line scrimmage, but to this day, no one has heard him utter forth Fischer in his psychology lectures. No one.

Rucker Plans "Bowtie Awareness Week"

editors of GQ magazine as being one of America's top ten sexiest men in bowties. This is the first spring such a list has been compiled. According to Mr. Knot, Accessories Editor of the male fashion magazine, "It is a great honor to be included in this ranking." Knot applauds Rucker as being very serious about his bowties.

The ten men were chosen on the basis of their involvement with bowties from an applicant pool of over 2,000. Rucker, who is completing his first year as an MWC Dean, is thrilled at his achievement, and will dedicate himself to the promotion of bowtie-wearing on campus next year.

Rucker plans to kick off "Bowtie Awareness Week" next October with a series of open meetings in which anyone wishing to attend may express his/her opinions about which knot-styles are most practical. The week-long celebration will include workshops on "The Do's and Don'ts of Bowtying" and membership drives for the new campus Bowtie Club, which Rucker will be advising. BYOB (Bring Your Own Bowtie) parties will also highlight the week, with counselors from Bowties Anonymous on hand to help those overindulging in the festivities.

When asked about his personal tie preferences, Rucker beamed, "these decisions are always hard, but I do prefer real hand-tied bowties to imitation clip-ons. For the novice, however, I would recommend clip-ons." Of course, silk ties are his favorites, and Rucker boasts a collection of 365 silk bowties. "One for each day of the year!" exclaims Rucker. As far as patterns go, Rucker is partial to polka dots. "Paisleys are not to be looked down on either," Rucker adds with gravity.

Also to be commended is Dr. Stephen Stageberg, professor of economics, similarly listed among the American top ten. Stageberg firmly believes that Bosguilbert, a seventeenth-century French economist, was thinking of bowties when he defined wealth as the full enjoyment of the necessities and luxuries of life. Stageberg cites other economists of the time, such as Sir William Petty and Bernard Mandeville, as also being avid bowtie wearers. When phoned about his recent nomination to the list, Stageberg was tied up and unavailable for comment.

Perversion Breaks out among Campus Squirrel Population

By Bushy Tail
Bull Staff Writer

A new trend has recently swept across the Mary Washington College (MWC) campus. Venture some squirrels have been bounding off of tree trunks and springing out of trash cans onto flowing female skirts. The victims believe these lachrymose critters are only searching for free journeys across campus.

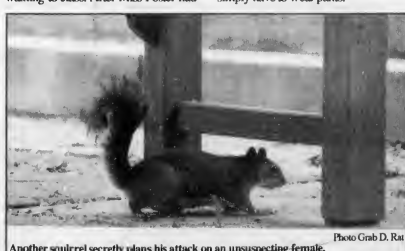

Although their intent is innocent, the squirrels are creating quite a ruckus. Aside from the destruction of many skirts, several audacious little creatures have figured out the feminine gender which accompanies them. Perversion is compelling the squirrels to sneak to the inside of the garments, sometimes even inching their way close to the derriere. Sophomore Morgan Atanio complained, "I am just appalled! Besides the fact I have been violated, I was having a heck of a time walking! That stupid squirrel kept tripping me!" Furthermore, several students saw sophomore Ashley Foster at 7:45 Wednesday morning charging up Marshall Hill with her arms flailing shrieking, "Whooooo! Whooooo!" Evidently, this flustered young female was carrying two squirrels under her skirt.

Both students and campus police agree that these corrupted beasts must be stopped. True, not every squirrel has taken advantage of its chauffeur; however, reports of debasing incidents are increasing. Skirt-wearing females should not have to fear walking to class. After Miss Foster had composed herself after the attack, she complained, "Those sly little buggers should have to walk just like everyone else. I have holes in my new skirt and bush bums from their tails!"

Investigators have not yet determined the origin of the trend, but they believe knowing the squirrels' motives is the first step to ending this havoc. As of now, prevention is the best remedy - girls will simply have to wear pants.

Another squirrel secretly plans his attack on an unsuspecting female.

Escort Service Exposed, Secrets Revealed

By Toucan Sam
Bull Associate Editor

According to this proposal, Mary Washington College's Escort Service will undergo several changes for the upcoming 1990-91 school year. The free ride service, which employs 10-15 students, will become the Happy Eagle Escort Club in the fall and student escorts will donate their time. This change is due in part to the College's new found focus on volunteerism.

It's not like they do anything anyway, except go to 7-11 for us on long production weekends.

someone does call, it's for a jaunt from Willard to the Eagles' Nest. Seriously though, the Escort Service does provide an invaluable service to the College community. According to modest estimates, they safely deliver 50-75 students, among other things (in thirty minutes or less), per week. And they work late, until 2 a.m. on weekends. But why can't the Campus Police just haul around those late night, mildly intoxicated stragglers? There's plenty of room in those new Jeeps, isn't there?

Back to the volunteer thing. Maybe the College should implement a volunteer escort requirement for all residential students, much like the current policy which requires dorm students to sit desk or face a stiff $75 penalty.

Call Ext. 4060 for a safe, free escort to your dorm or car between 7 p.m. and 2 a.m. (or a ride to Pizza Hut, Micky D's, or Sevi.)

Boheim Adds '72 Pacer As Incentive

By Money W. Annabe

Standout freshman center Neil Gallagher announced yesterday that he was withdrawing from Mary Washington College on May 3 in order to transfer to Syracuse University in January.

By dropping out of college prior to the completion of exams, Gallagher will become eligible to play for the Orangemen in January.

Had he completed this semester at MWC, Gallagher would have been required by NCAA regulations to sit out an entire season. "Just couldn't wait," explained Gallagher when asked why he decided to leave school a mere two days before the completion of the spring semester.

"Plus," added Gallagher whose teammates refer to the silky-smooth 6'6" starter as "Money" because of his resemblance to NBA star Mike Jordan, "Boheim offered me a pair of Chucks and a 1972 Pacer."

He added that MWC boosters only offered him late night use of Goodrick (for drinking purposes) as incentive to stay. "It was no contest," added Money, who once missed eight dunks in a pickup game of Nerf against his 5'4" girlfriend.

"This is a huge opportunity for me," commented the native of pre-Cambrian Asia Minor. "Just think, by this time next year I'll be showerin' with Billy Owens."

Owens denied comment on Gallagher's enthusiasm, but a spokesman for the SU Athletic department said that Owens is ecstatic about playing with Money.

Orangemen Head Coach Jim Boehm proclaimed his excitement in an early morning press conference upon hearing Gallagher's decision. "This is great!"

"We desperately needed someone to fill Derrick's shoes," explained Boehm. "They're a lot alike, except that Coleman could shoot, dribble, and pass."

Neil's former coach, Tom Davies, will also be leaving MWC in the fall to replace UNLV Head Coach Jerry Tarkanian who shocked thousands last week when he announced that he will run for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I'm sure the new coach will miss him, but not that much because we recently signed a 5'2" guy who is even more adept at kicking the ball out of bounds than Neil," assured Davies.

Gallagher led all Division III schools in several categories this year, including: turnovers, turnovers per minute, and turnovers per game.

Summing up the campus-wide response to Gallagher's departure, Mike Jones, who once denied Gallagher of a dunk opportunity by pulling up for the 'J' on a two-on-one break, said, "I'll miss seeing Money's snappy head about as much as I'll miss Davies."

Sigler Forgoes Eligibility, Submits Name for Draft

Lakers Like His "Magic" Size

By Nerly Boy
Bull Editor

Following the lead of Chris Jackson, the nation's third leading scorer, Mary Washington College non-star and set shooter Billy "Steve Hale" Sigler announced yesterday that he would forgo his final two years of eligibility, and enter the NBA draft.

At a press conference yesterday, an emotional Sigler stated, "It's really the best thing for me, what with Coach going" to UNLV, and Neil headin' to Syracuse."

The 6-1/2", 132 lb. Sigler shocked family and friends with his decision.

"I've thought about this for a long time," stated the amiable Mercerie, "and I'm sure it's really what's best."

Sigler, who once scored 32 in a Pee Wee League basketball game, was the leading scorer for the Eagles during the spring semester.

Sigler believes his athletic prowess will help him be one of the top 10 or 12 picks in this year's draft. "I mean you got Derrick [Coleman], Bo Kimble, and of course Chris, I've got to be up there somewhere. The only thing that might keep me from going" that high is if they bring up that dem' steroids scandal thing," drawled Sigler.

After a long discussion with his close personal friend Jackson, with whom Sigler has a lot in common, (Sigler averaged 12 points per game, Jackson's season low was 12), the surprisingly stupid Sigler made his decision. "Chris really helped me a lot. I hope we get to play on the same team. I like him," added Sigler.

Sigler mentioned his range, quickness and ability to end up on the floor after his shots, as assets which make him attractive to pro clubs.

Currently, the Lakers, Bulls, Hornets and Nets are all interested in the sturdy-built Sigler. Lakers Head Coach Pat Riley commented on the versatile Sigler. "He's got a good build. I think he could fit right in with our organization. We've been looking for someone to carry Magic's sweaty jock, and to pull down Michael Cooper's socks for years."

Sigler's former coach Tom Davies, who recently turned down the UVA opening because he refused to do Food Lion commercials, commented on the untalented sophomore's departure. "I really wish that little Billy would come out to UNLV with me. We could use his speed and tenacious 'D' out there, you know," Davies added that Sigler's sheer strength and raw talent make him a risk any NBA club would be willing to take.

"This is my ticket out of Mercer," exclaimed the Hicksville, Virginia native.

Through broken sobs, Sigler bid his former teammates farewell, wishing them luck on improving upon their anemic 1989-90 record. "Perhaps what I'll miss most of all," sniffled Sigler, "is the chance to live with Phil."

McNamara Honored As Athlete-of-the-Year

Varsity athletes furious

The 1989-90 Mary Washington College Athlete-of-the-Year award has been announced and it is turning quite a few heads around campus.

It sets a precedent in that it was given to a non-varsity athlete for the first time ever. The recipient of this hallowed award is junior Jay McNamara.

The furor over the announcement stems from the athletes who were overlooked, all of them varsity athletes who bring a great deal of revenue into the college.

Others who were considered: Dan Beverly, baseball; Kim Glover, softball; and Fred Dolan, women's basketball. The committee who selected McNamara consisted of Dr. Glover of the English department, Rob Epler (intramural softball umpire), and Jay's mom. All three of them had very good reasons for selecting Jay. Dr. Glover rationalized, "Jay's snever in class, so I figure he's probably about there sleeping because he has been practicing intramurals so hard."

Rob Epler said, "Jay was the shortest catcher in the league so it made it easier to see if the ball hit the strike mat."

Jay's mom: "Because I like him."

Jay's year was highlighted by four kills in intramural volleyball, a point from the foul line in intramural basketball, and reaching the Mendoza line in slowpitch softball, as well as sitting desk at Goodrick.

Dan Beverly was asked to comment on this year's recipient, but the interview ended abruptly when he asked, "Didn't he used to manage the Reds?"

We attempted to reach McNamara for comment in Intro. to Lit. Studies, but unfortunately, he did not show for the month April.

Mike "Penie Boy" Antonio Arrested for Embezzling from Mothers'

Mothers' Rugby star Mike "Penie Boy" Antonio was arrested today for embezzling funds from the team's recent jacket and tee-shirt sales. If convicted, he faces a minimum two-year sentence.

"That's a lot of soap-on-a-rope," joked arresting officer Jim Bartlett.

In his defense, Antonio said that he needed the money for condoms, beer, and razor blades.

"I had to do it," explained the fifth-year junior.

Antonio allegedly pilfered $68.27 from money that he collected for the jackets and tees.

"Actually, I think it was more," asserted Antonio's ex-mistress Michele Silver '90. "He spent that much just on condoms."

Judge Dork Lepers set bail at $8, but Antonio was unable to pay.

Davies Deserts Eagles' Nest To Enter Abandoned Shark Tank

By Nap P. Head
Bull Editor

After the Mary Washington College men's basketball team posted a dismal 4-18 record at the end of the 89-90 season, there was some speculation that head coach Tom Davies was looking for another school.

Those rumors were confirmed yesterday, when Davies announced he would leave MWC to coach at UNLV next season. Davies would be filling the vacancy left by former coach turned U.S. congressman Jerry Tarkanian. Tarkanian announced after his Runnin' Rebels won the NCAA tournament, that first he would go to Disneyland, and then he would begin his congressional campaign.

Drawing from a pool of applicants which included Jim Valvano, Bob Wade, Chip Walker, as well as Davies, UNLV athletic director Lewis R. Boy decided to go with the outspoken, volatile Davies. "We needed someone who could pick up where Tark left off. Someone who could earn the respect of and control his players. We think Davies was the best man."

Davies, who had put his name up for consideration at a number of other schools, including UVA, NC State, and Xavier, acknowledged that he would prefer to stay on the east coast, and would have liked to have coached in the ACC. "I would have preferred to stay on the east coast, and would have liked to coach in the ACC," admitted Davies.

Davies had been offered the UVA position left vacant by Terry Holland, after whom Davies patterns his coaching style, but turned it down after refusing to do Food Lion commercials. "Terry and I are a lot alike," acknowledged Davies, "but he's too much of a pansy. I wouldn't want an image like that to be attached to me if I coached there."

"UNLV is the place for me. I've been looking for a school that could fit in with my coaching style. I really wish Billy Sigler would have transferred out here with me. Who gives a crap about Neil?" Boy explained, "Davies was looking for a run n' gun type of offense, the kind of tempo he's used to. With his attitude, and long list of winning programs, we think he'll adjust quite well. I mean, my little sister could coach this team to 20 wins. I hear, Davies knows what that's like. We only hope he can beat the no-names we play."

Rather than playing the familiar Jaws theme for Tarkanian, UNLV pep band members will opt for the Flipper theme song for Davies. Davies also recently signed a lucrative towel contract in accordance with his new position. Whereas Tark used to suck on his towels, Davies will be used to throwing his in. "I know it will be hard for them to adjust to me," admitted Davies, "and I want to do the most I can to help them adjust." "We asked him to shave his head and to do some acid to ensure he's more accepted by the fans, but he refused," stated Boy.

Sold Out Concert Features Kool Moe, D.C. Posse

Cedric and the D.C. Posse, who hail from our nation's capital, will open for Kool Moe. They rocked MWC earlier in the semester when they closed for Pleasure, another dope rap act.

Kool Moe crossed into the mainstream in 1986 with the mega hit "Wild Wild West." Recent singles include "They Want Money," and "I Go to Work."

His on-stage gyrations have made him extremely popular with the ladies. "I can't wait," stated MWC senior Maria Lincez. "This guy can really move. I hope he'll father my children some day."

Another fan Nikki "Dog" Anzaidi: "He's a stud. If he lives in Willard 115, I would probably go out with him."

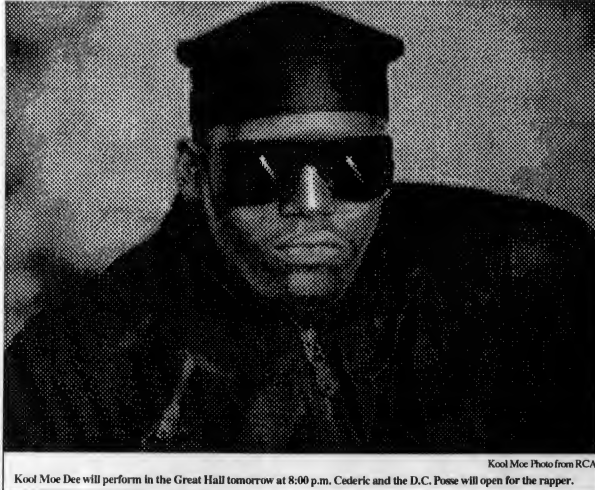

His silky rhymes and innovative stage show will be complemented by the D.C. Posse.

"I don't think you could have booked a better opening act," raved Kool Moe's "Bosaks. I hear this Cedric guy is real fly."

The Posse is equally ecstatic about their encore performance MWC.

"We look forward to returning," stated lead singer Jazzy Crack Master Kool-Aid Honey T.

"The peoples really enjoyed our show," added Honey T, "but I think the security was a little tight."

His sidekick M.C. Posse-Slice Hammer Boy agreed with Honey T.

"I can understand why they called in the extra coppers, but one of those police dog bitches bit my jock," he complained. "It wasn't real def, know what I mean cuz?" Headliner Kool Moe's lyrics are noted for their strong anti-drug theme. He commonly disses both users and sellers in his rhymes. "When I want to get high, I smoke themike," slams Moe Dee in "Get the Picture."

"I think it's important," he explained, "because I get lots of free publicity."

Born Maurice Clarence Dewes in 1966, the twenty-three year old Moe Dee grew up in suburban Los Angeles (not Watts). He lead a carefree childhood and graduated with honors from Winston Penley Preparatory Academy at age 17.

"I had a pretty easy childhood," admitted Moe Dee. "As a teen, the toughest decision I ever had was whether to drive Daddy's Benz or Mom's Caddy."

Other rapper's have

Moe "a softy."

Public Enemy's Chuck Dee called Moe Dee a joke and an insult to the revolutionary movement, and added, "He's a wimpy-sissy girl."

To these accusations, Moe Dee replies, "Who is this L.L. guy anyway? He's got no rhymes, no girls, and no cash."

And as for Chuck Dee he slams, "He's got nothing."

M.C. Sugar Free Pepsi Lyte, who often tours with the Posse as an armed groupie, said she expects the Posse to attract more attention than Kool Moe.

Anyone who has ever seen the self-proclaimed "Don" knows that Kool Moe's rhymes are as hard as his libido.

"Everybody knows what that pansy, non-rhym' home boy Moe Dee has to say. His anti-crack and anti-violence messages are well known. So obviously he can't have as much fun as the Posse," she concluded.

But anyone who has ever seen the self-proclaimed "Don" knows that Kool Moe's rhymes are as hard as his libido.

Gary Eberly Cuts Record Deal

Gary Eberly strutting his stuff.

By Richard Clark
Assistant Music Director

Gary Eberly, a junior at MWC, has recently landed a record deal with Limit To Take, an infamous producer with Make You a Star Record Company.

Gary was "discovered" right here at Mary Washington while working at Seabcock. While he was working, Gary has had the habit of singing, mostly while on dishline, and soon gained a renowned reputation among his fellow workers. His musical ability was soon noticed by the many college groups, which caused him to be noticed by Mr. Talente.

Gary's repertoire includes a variety of styles and artists. These run the gamut from Old Top 40s to rap and his favorite, Bobby Brown.

Gary first gained a nationwide following when he competed in a Star Search rap contest over Spring Break. Not only did Gary come back with a totally rad tan, but he had won the contest and gained the chance to compete for the really big prize. His prizes for the first contest included a ten-year supply of Fake-and-Bake suntan lotion and a year's supply of Surfboard Turtle Wax.

A recent rumor going around campus is that the producers of the old 70's show "Solid Gold" plan to revive the show in order to give Gary a showcase for his talent. If he chooses to take the offer, Gary would be in a long line of famous performers to host Solid Gold. A few such artists include Marilyn McCoo of Fifth Dimension and Rick Dees of "Eat My Shorts" fame.

According to Gary, he has not made any plans yet with regard to his career as a singing star.

"The only thing I really want to do right now is graduate," says Gary.

Well, Gary, we wish you the best of luck in your effort to succeed in everything that you do.

Horriblescopes

Horoscopes by Cosmica Willard ... Aries (March 21-April 19) While your great personality shines throughout most, be weary of all who say "You must have your academic advisor's signature on this form." During the panic of class registration keep your head on straight. There is always drop/add period. Even if the administration gods are not on your side, the planets will be aligned next fall.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Though your sign is an American four-door luxury driving machine, it's best if you stay at home this month. With exams coming up the library is a must. Romance with a sensitive and good-looking rugby player around your birthday is a no go (especially because there are none to be found). Many will ask your age; for such purposes, keep two forms of I.D. handy (fake or otherwise).

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Today your cosmic intellect (what little is left after Friday night) is in the spotlight. Your intuitive knowledge of the world paper commodities exchange could be the cornerstone of the solution to the great MWC toilet paper shortage. You might want to start packing now as unexpected airm disturbances have you in a crunch for time during finals week.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) With your planets out of phase, the gorgeous weather entrances you out of doors. Your ability to concentrate is stifled by a headache (hangover from Grill on the Hill perhaps?) Stay clear of Monroe fountain and watch out for spherical objects falling from the sky. The boys of Willard and their balls of tennis might have something in store for your cranium.

Leo (July 23-August 22) End of the semester finances are low. Anticipate high dorm damage fees. Don't despair. Next month as your stars align, you could be the recipient of a large sum of money. Don't throw away the hundreds of sweepstakes entries you received last week.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Lucky stars are on your side. After months of resumé building, your diligence might soon pay off. Your aspirations will be fulfilled. Now that summer is here job opportunities in the Frederickburg area are manifold. Your life long dream to become chief janitorial engineer has been realized. What's more, you won't have to curtail your hobbies of cruising Rt. 3 and eating at Taco Bell.

Libra (September 23-October 22) This month's planetary imbalances lets your lease for the summer abode fall through. Your search for the summer job will have to wait until after exams. Resist long trips to peninsular states with the company car, it could prove detrimental to the old criminal record, not to mention your classic reputation (right, Dave?). Wherever you go, there you are.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) Success abounds this month. The fact that you just cracked your first book for the final is of no consequence. Your Scorpion sense of creativity and master attack exudes from within. "Hang on and hold tight."

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) Your natural resistance to reading or believing horoscopes has come to pass. Your future is unclear and vulnerable to the ways of others. Your insight to uncover the true meaning of the crypt provides worthless in Astrological matters.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) It's in your nature to procrastinate. This time of year proves especially challenging. Count your rainy days to catch up on your studying. A secret admirer might have your sight. Be cautious around the full moon.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) While the temptation is strong, shaving your head bald like many of the esteemed water polo players is not in the stars for you. However trying it may be, use your Aquarian will power and count your lucky stars.

Pisces (February 19-March 20) Even though your lottery was 1351 and your name is presently last on the waiting list, this may be your day to have your problems resolved. Be wary and keep your nose to the grindstone or you may be one of those unfortunate souls who are not returning next year.

Writers Run out of Words on GH

By Cordelia Loyelom
Television Editor

For those who have been avid General Hospital fans, what the heck is going on? Crystals, aliens, and people returning from the dead make up only a fraction of the current storyline.

For the GH-watchers (who have for some reason or another neglected to watch for a few weeks) the alien has landed in Port Charles, well, only once, Casey Rogers. This incredibly sexy alien (who would have great appeal if only he wasn't so wierd) is taking on the forces of the evil Caesar Faison. Casey is doing this to recover a crystal and take it to his planet, Lumina, and to save the world from annihilation. If this seems a bit off the wall, you haven't seen anything yet. Helping Casey with his seemingly impossible task (even for an alien) are Anna (double agent extraordinaire) Lavery and Frisco (boy, do I need a good haircut) Jones. These two were brought in when Robin, mature as she is, can't handle it on her own, and decides to tell her mother. Anna thinks Casey is feeding Robin a line until she sees him "glow."

"What now?" the totally disinterested watcher thinks. Use your own imagination and let us know what you come up with. It sounds like the old and faithful GH writers need a little bit of help.

For those of you who don't know what's going on or what had gone on between Anna and Faison, here goes. Faison was in the DVX, the agency against the WSB, and Anna was the beautiful double agent. Faison is the only person besides Sean and Robert that knows of Anna's past. He was supposed to have been killed in a fire, but, lo and behold he's back. What is this fascination the writers have for bringing people back from the dead? It is getting a little old. First, Anna, then Frisco. Angh! Anna doesn't know that Faison is alive yet, but we are all sure that she soon will.

The really pertinent question has to do with Alan and Lucy's sex scandal. When is Alan going to wise up and get rid of her? The only reason I can think of as to why they are getting married is to save two other more important characters. You really love to hate the both of them.

As you can see, there is obviously a great lapse of good material in the GH storyline. I, for one, who has stuck through General Hospital through thick and thin (such as the Aztec treasure, the "Domino" Theory, and many revivals), find the storyline extremely disappointing. I am actually considering (choke, gasp) deserting the show in favor of something with a bit more substance such as the Muppets (something always gets me about Muppets).
